TERMS & CONDITIONS

RHB INVESTMENT BANK BERHAD

A) EXPLANATORY TEXT – DERIVATIVES

This text seeks to explain in general terms:

- (i) the nature of Derivatives contracts,
- (ii) the obligations assumed by a person who instructs RHB Investment Bank Berhad (“RHBIB”) to enter into a Derivatives contract; and contains other relevant information.

Should you be in any doubt as to your obligations or other risks involved, you should ask your broker or seek other professional advice.

1 THE NATURE OF DERIVATIVES CONTRACTS

1.1 FUTURES CONTRACTS

A futures contract (or exchange listed derivatives) is a standardized agreement, made on a recognized exchange, to buy or sell a specified quantity of a described commodity, security or index (the underlying) at an agreed date in the future.

There are two types of futures contracts:-

- (a) deliverable contracts, under which the seller agrees to deliver to the buyer, and the buyer agrees to take delivery of, the quantity of the commodity described in the contract; and
- (b) cash settlement contracts, under which the two parties will make a cash adjustment between them according to whether the price of the underlying has risen or fallen since the time the contract was made.

The terms and conditions of a futures contract are set out in the rules and regulations of the exchange on which the contract was made.

The futures price is determined in the marketplace by means of an open outcry system or an electronic system and represents a consensus of market opinion what the price of the underlying should be at the specified future time.

Since all contracts for a given future month in the same market are alike, obligations under futures contracts are easily transferred from one party to another. A trader who holds a contract to buy / sell can cancel this obligation by taking a new contract to sell / buy in the same month, a process known as offsetting or closing out the contract. In each case there will be a profit or loss equal to the difference between the buying and selling prices multiplied by the standard contract amount.

Each trader in the market is required to put up a deposit (initial margin) in order to trade. Contract deposits are governed by the minimum set by the Clearing House and vary from time to time according to the volatility of the market being carefully calculated to cover the maximum expected movement in the market from one day to the next.

Variation margins must be paid by any trader whose contract is showing a loss. If the Client does not pay a margin, RHBIB is entitled to close out the Client's position and deduct the resulting realised loss from the original deposit.

1.2 OPTION CONTRACTS

Standardised option contracts are available on many exchanges. An option is the right, but not the obligation, to enter into a futures contract or the underlying market to take / make delivery of the underlying, granted in return for a premium. A call option is an option to buy the underlying instrument at a designated price (the exercise price or striking price), any time before the option expires, irrespective of the current underlying instrument price. A put option is an option to sell at the exercise price or sell the underlying instrument at a designated price.

If a trader buys an option, his loss in the market is limited to the premium paid for the option, which is non-refundable. However, the person who sells (i.e. grants) the option has a similar potential liability to the holder of a futures contract, and will be called to pay margins if the price moves against him.

Depending on the type of option, it may only be exercised at expiry (referred to as European style option) or it may be exercised anytime before expiry (referred to as American style option). The Client should be aware of the style of the option that the Client is trading as it may affect the Client's obligation to take or make delivery.

Provided the underlying market has moved in his favour, the holder of an option can take profit by selling it later at a higher premium, or by exercising it and closing out the resulting contract. The profit depends on the movement in the underlying market and is potentially unlimited.

On the other hand, sellers (grantors) of option contracts have limited profit potential (they cannot earn more than the premium for which the option is sold) and unlimited potential for loss.

2 THE NATURE OF THE OBLIGATIONS ASSUMED BY A PERSON WHO INSTRUCT RHBIB TO ENTER INTO A DERIVATIVES CONTRACT

Clients of RHBIB (who under the Exchange's rules must enter into a written agreement with their Clients) having given instructions to RHBIB to enter into derivatives contracts on their behalf, must be prepared to:

- 2.1 Pay a deposit on each contract upon execution of an order not less than the minimum deposit set down by the relevant exchange or clearing house for that contract. RHBIB is entitled to call a higher deposit than the minimum set in order to protect its position as principal.
- 2.2 Pay on demand any calls made by RHBIB for margins to maintain the futures position (i.e. Contract or set of contracts) held by the Client.

- 2.3 Deliver, or take delivery of and pay the contract price in full for, the underlying instrument described in the specifications of any deliverable contract held by the Client which is still in force at the close of trading on the last day of trading.
- 2.4 Pay up any losses which are incurred as a result of a mandatory cash adjustment made on a cash settlement contract held by the Client which is still in force at the close of trading on the last day of trading in the relevant market.
- 2.5 Waive any interest on funds deposited with RHBIB, whether for deposits or margins or deposited for trading in derivatives contracts, unless the written agreement between RHBIB and the Client stipulates that interest is to be paid on such funds.
- 2.6 Take up the opposite position in the derivatives market from the resulting position held by the buyer of an option, if the Client has sold (i.e. granted) an option and is exercised by the option buyer.

C) RISK DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

This brief statement does not disclose all the risks and other significant aspects of trading in Derivatives. In light of the risks, you should undertake such transactions only if you understand the nature of the Derivatives (and contractual relationships) into which you are entering and the extent of your exposure to risk. Trading in Derivatives is not suitable for many members of the public. You should carefully consider whether trading is appropriate for you in light of your experience, objectives, financial resources and other relevant circumstances.

1 RISKS ASSOCIATED WITH FUTURES CONTRACTS

1.1 EFFECT OF "LEVERAGE" OR "GEARING"

Transactions in Derivatives carry a high degree of risk. The amount of initial margin is small relative to the value of the Derivatives contract so that transactions are "leveraged" or "geared". A relatively small market movement will have proportionately larger impact on the funds you have deposited or will have to deposit – this may work against you as well as for you. You may sustain a total loss of initial margin funds and any additional funds deposited with RHBIB to maintain your position. If the market moves against your position or margin levels are increased, you may be called upon to pay substantial additional funds on short notice to maintain your position. If you fail to comply with a request for additional funds within the time prescribed, your position may be liquidated at a loss as you will be liable for any resulting deficit.

1.2 RISK-REDUCING ORDERS OR STRATEGIES

The placing of certain orders (e.g. “stop-loss” orders, where permitted under the business rules of an exchange company) which are intended to limit losses to certain amounts may not be effective because market conditions may make it impossible to execute such orders. Strategies using combinations of positions such as “spread” and “straddle” positions may be as risky as taking simple “long” or “short” positions.

2 RISK ASSOCIATED WITH OPTION CONTRACTS

2.1 VARIABLE DEGREE OF RISK

Transactions in option carry a high degree of risk. Purchasers and sellers of options should familiarise themselves with the type of options (i.e. put or call) which they contemplate trading and the associated risks. You should calculate the extent to which the value of the options must increase for your position to become profitable, taking into account the premium and all transaction costs.

The purchaser of option may offset or exercise the options or allow the options to expire. The exercise of an option results either in a cash settlement or in the purchaser acquiring or delivering the underlying instrument. If the option is on a futures contract, the purchaser will acquire a long or short position (as the case may be) in relation to the futures contract, with associated liabilities for margin. If the purchased options expire worthless, you will suffer a total loss of your investment (which is the option premium) in addition to incurring transaction costs. If you are contemplating purchasing deep-out-of-the-money options, you should be aware that the chance of such options becoming profitable ordinarily is remote.

Selling (“writing” or “granting”) an option generally entails considerably greater risk than purchasing options. Although the premium received by a seller is fixed, the seller may sustain a loss well in excess of that amount. The seller will be liable for additional margin to maintain the position if the market moves unfavourably. The seller will also be exposed to the risk of the purchaser exercising the option and the seller will be obligated to either settle the option in cash or to acquire or deliver the underlying instrument. If the option is on a futures contract, the seller will acquire a position in the futures contract with associated liabilities for margin. If the option is “covered”, for example by the seller assuming a corresponding long position in the underlying that is the subject of the option, the risk may be reduced. If the option is not covered, the risk of loss can be unlimited.

Certain exchanges in some jurisdictions permit deferred payment of the option premium, exposing the purchaser to liability for margin payments not exceeding the amount of the premium. The purchaser is still subject to the risk of losing the premium and transaction costs. When the option is exercised or expires, the purchaser is responsible for any unpaid premium outstanding at that time.

3 ADDITIONAL RISKS COMMON TO DERIVATIVES

3.1 TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF CONTRACTS

You should ask the derivatives broker with whom you deal about the terms and conditions of the specific Derivatives which you are trading and associated obligations (e.g. the circumstances under which you may become obligated to make or take delivery of the underlying instrument of a Derivatives and, in respect of Derivatives that are eligible exchange-traded options or futures options (“options”), expiration dates and restrictions on the time for exercise). Under certain circumstances, the specification of outstanding contracts (including the exercise price of an option) may be modified by the Exchange or Clearing House to reflect changes in the underlying instrument or state of affairs that is the subject of the Derivatives.

3.2 SUSPENSION OR RESTRICTION OF TRADING AND PRICING RELATIONSHIP

Market conditions (e.g. illiquidity) and / or the operation of the rules of certain markets (e.g. the suspension of trading in any contract or contract month because of price limits or “circuit breakers”) may increase the risk of loss by making it difficult or impossible to effect transactions or liquidate / offset positions. If you have sold options, this may increase the risk of loss.

Further, normal pricing relationships between the underlying and the Derivatives may not exist. This can occur when, for example, the absence of an underlying reference price may make it difficult to judge “fair” value.

3.3 DEPOSITED CASH AND SECURITIES

You should familiarise yourself with the protections accorded to money or other securities you deposit for domestic and foreign transactions, particularly in the event of a derivatives broker’s insolvency or bankruptcy. The extent to which you may recover your money or securities may be governed by specific legislation or local rules. In some jurisdictions, securities which had been specifically identifiable as your own will be pro-rated in the same manner as cash for purposes of distribution in the event of a shortfall.

3.4 COMMISSION AND OTHER CHARGES

Before you begin to trade, you should obtain a clear explanation of all commission, fees and other charges for which you will be liable. These charges will affect your net profit (if any) or increases your loss.

3.5 CURRENCY RISKS

The profit or loss in transactions in foreign currency-denominated contracts (whether they are traded in your own or another jurisdiction) will be affected by fluctuations in currency rates where there is a need to convert from the currency denomination of the contract to another currency.

3.6 TRADING FACILITIES

Most open-outcry and electronic trading facilities are supported by computer-based component systems for the order-routing, execution, matching, registration or clearing of trades. As with all facilities and systems, they are vulnerable to temporary disruption or failure. Your ability to recover certain losses may be subject to limits on liability imposed by the system provider, the market, the clearing house and / or derivatives brokers. Such limits may vary – you should ask the derivatives broker with which you deal for details in this respect.

3.7 ELECTRONIC TRADING

Trading on an electronic trading system may differ not only from trading in an open-outcry market but also from trading on other electronic trading systems. If you undertake transactions on an electronic trading system, you will be exposed to risks associated with the system including the failure of hardware or software. The result of any system failure may be that your order is either not executed according to your instructions or is not executed at all.
